CHANCES FOR FREE WHITE LABOR-LETTER FROM SIGNOR ALVARADO. New York, Feb. 7, 1861.

To the Editors of the N. Y. Evening Post : I have perused with great satisfaction the letter of the Hon. E. G. Squier, in the Evening Post of Monday, addressed to Senator Anthony, on the subject of cotton cultivation in Central on the subject of cotton cultivation in Central America, and it has suggested to me a few ideas which may not be without interest, at this time, to the American public.

1. Although Mr. Squier has a very exact knowledge of the production of cotton in Central America, yet he has not stated the case as strongly as the facts warrant. In Honduras, and particularly in the valleys of the large rivers, the cotton plant flourishes with a luxuriance entitling it, after a growth of two or three years, to the designation of a tree, producing two crops a year of a minimum each of five pounds, and a maximum of from ten to twelve pounds. A plantation will last from eight to nine years, without renewal; and furthermore, without renewal; and furthermore as the plant is one on which animals do no feed, as on maize, &c., it requires little protec-tion, and may be cultivated at a minimum of cost and trouble in the way of enclosures. In fact, once started, a cotton plantation over-comes and kills all other vegetation.

I have long reflected on this branch of in-dustry and export in Honduras, and have sent considerable quantities of cotton to Europe, where it has been examined and tested in Manchester, Glasgow, Rouen, and St Paul, and also to New York and Boston. The reports from all these points have been very nearly the same, and in every respect all that could be desired. In Manchester it was reported in present or reighteen cents, per pound. ported nine pence, or eighteen cents, per pound, and in Boston, according to the report of Mr.

J. Raye, seventeen cents per pound.

But, unfortunately, our Central American roads do not admit of the transportation of so bulky an article; and in order to its cultivation with profit, it will be necessary to select plantations accessible to commerce, on the sea coast or in the valleys of navigable rivers, and if such places shall be far from the large towns or more populous districts of country, capable of supplying the requisite labor, it is evident that the enterprise of producing this staple must be supported by adequate capital, and by labor introduced from abroad, or attracted by the assurance of good and steady pay.

I think the moment has arrived for trying

I think the moment has arrived for trying the experiment of cotton cultivation in Central America, with free labor; and if the matter were taken in hand here by a company with a sufficient capital to commence work on a proper scale, I am entirely certain that the results would be equally satisfactory and brilliant.

2. But it is not alone as regards cotton that Honduras offers great attractions. The whole Atlantic declivity abounds in precious woods, the value of which will more than cover the cost of clearing the lands designed for cultivacost of clearing the lands designed for cultiva-tion. On the lands which I have specially refrom On the lands which have specially re-ferred to, the supply of precious woods is very large, and there is also a great number of ule or India rubber trees, which in themselves would furnish no inconsiderable source of revenue. These are inducements extra, in con-sidering the value of the country for cotton

3. After the plantations of cotton are once established, they require no care except twice a year, at the periods for gathering the crops. The remaining time would consequently be free for other operations, such as the cultivation of sugar. In general the indigenous cane, called "toita," attains a height of three yards; the Jamaica variety from ten to the and a believed. ten and a half yards. Neither requires irriga-tion, nor do they require replanting oftener than once in from twelve to fourteen years. Va-rious considerable rivers that penetrate the country offer facilities for the introduction of the requisite machinery connected with this cul-

As regards coffee, I hardly know what to say, beyond that there are thousands of places ere it can be produced as well as in Costa Rica, and the coffee of that country, it is well known, is second to none produced on this con-tinent. I can bear witness to the fact that it often produces as high as twenty to thirty pounds to each tree.

5. Cocoa is indigenous on the lands to which I have referred, and grows wild in the forests which cover the greater part of the plains of Suls. Several small plantations have been started there, which at the end of three years have given an average return of five dollars per tree, at the prices of cocoa in the country itself

Tobacco equal in size and excellent that of Cuba is also produced here. Its only inferiority results from want of care in cultiva-tion. This difficulty could easily be remedied Nevertheless, the tobacco of Santa Rosa, better own throughout Central America and parts of Mexico as that of "Copan," has a high rep-utation for excellence. Considerable quanti-ties have been exported to Cuba, and there manufactured into genuine Havanas. A consignment, made by myself, to France, although damaged by the voyage, brought 156 francs the

You have here a hurried resume of the avail able products of this region. I could enter more largely into statistics, but my purpose is only to furnish hints for reflection, and to direct attention more particularly to the valuable sug gestions thrown out by Mr. Squier. If, in view present or future complications in the South the Government of the United States would en courage enterprise in the direction of Centra America, whether in the way of emigration of by favorable commercial discriminations, I am sure the results would astonish the commercia and industrial public of this country.

In regard to the allegation that white mer cannot labor in the regions I have indicated, I have only to say that I have myself established plantations of coffee and cocoa in the plain o Sula, which is less salubrious than most part of the country, and that they are worked by emigrants from France, who labor as efficiently as in their own country, and with no greate inconvenience from climate or other causes.

The experience of the filibusters proves little as regards the salubrity of the country. The suffered greatly, it is true, from the obvious causes of exposure, harassment, scanty and bad provisions, and dissipation. Their fatigues were infinitely greater than any which the ag-riculturist would be called on to endure. And yet these filibusters, epidemics aside, got on as

But admitting that it would not be prudent to commence operations with foreigners, yet there need be no deficiency of laborers, especially now, when the cutting of mahogany is nearly suspended. The Caribs and other laborers of the North Coast are almost entirely without work, and would not fail to flock to any point where sure and good pay could be obtained.

Should the English company, which has now the Honduras railway in hand, go on with that work; or should they adopt the plan of building a preliminary tram road, which they have under consideration—in either case the facts connected with cotton and sugar culture in connected with cotton and sugar culture in Central America will be invested with still greater importance. But even without that work, the country offers extended facilities and wors, the country oners extended hellittes and unlimited resources to the enterprise, intelligence, and capital of the Northern States, and ample means of supplying all deficiencies in tropical staples, which may result from any political complication that may arise.

Very truly, Leon Alvarado.

IMMIGRATION. IMMIGRATION.

The State Department has issued its formal statement in regard to the number, sex, age, and occupation of passengers arriving in the United States by sea from foreign countries during the year ending December 31, 1860.

The arrivals in 1860 were 179,469; of those, 108,550 were males, and 70,833 females; sex not stated, 86. The number of deaths on the research was 222. Of the whole number of passes not stated, 86. The number of deaths on the voyage was 222. Of the whole number of passengers, 26,051 were natives of the United States, 13,001 of England, 48,637 of Ireland, 50,746 of Germany, 3,745 of Prussia, 5,467 of China, 1,384 of the West Indies. Greece and Malta sent 1 each. New Zealand sent 2. Of the passengers, 173,491 stated they intended to reside in the United States, 3,018 said nothing about it; 1,519 were bound to British America, 598 to Great Britain.

Of their occupations, 11,207 were merchants.

Of their occupations, 11,207 were merchants, 13,033 mechanics, 27,742 farmers, 31,268 laborers, 116 lawyers, 221 physicians, 108 musicians, 27 actors, and 93,000 did not state their occu-

The report concludes with a statement of the number of passengers arriving in the United States by sea from foreign countries from September 30, 1843, to December 31, 1860. The whole number arriving within that period is 4,386,441, of whom probably more than four millions were aliens. We copy the statistics, showing the number of arrivals for the last ten DIVERSION OF RED RIVER.—It Proposes to Flow to the Gulf by a New Channel.—It has for some years been evident, that by a sure and rapid process the connection between Red river and the Mississippi is being cut off. The river and the Mississippi is being cut off. The effect of the complete consummation of this process, now going on with ex raordinary and alarming rapidity, will be to divert Red river into the Atchafalaya, which affords a channel for its waters, and compels it to flow to the Gulf at Berwick's Bay. Thus the whole of the immense and productive region lying in the valley of the Red river will suffer the embarrassment of being shut off from communication with its natural market; while New Orleans will lose the rich trade which the river country annually pours into her lap. These contingencies are not remote. They will surely happen within a few years, if something be not done to obviate them. For some years past the conobviate them. For some years past the con-nection between Red river and the Mississippi has been growing more and more precarious, till, in low water, it is almost entirely lost. In the high water season the volume of water which pours down the Atchafalaya exceeds the flow of Red river, as the Mississippi actually backs up through Old river, so that the current m instead of into the main stream,-N.
